Dr. Edward Edy Kaufman holds degrees in Political Science, International Relations and Sociology from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, a doctorate from the University of Paris (Sorbonne) in diplomatic history and post-doctoral studies in Social Science Research Methodology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. He has authored and co-authored 12 books and more than seventy articles in the general area of international relations, with an emphasis on human rights and conflict resolution topics, and a regional specialization on Latin America and the Middle East, and continues more than two decades team-teaching with one of them. His current research and advocacy interest are in merging the paradigms of human rights and conflict resolution.

Prof. Kaufman has served both as Director of Center for International Development and Conflict Management [CIDCM] at the University of Maryland and the Truman Institute for the Advancement of Peace at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Dr. Kaufman is an expert in the areas of the teaching and training of conflict transformation, and facilitation of workshops with CIDCM’s “Partners in Conflict” program. He has done extensive action research in strengthening civil society and peacebuilding with the Palestinian-Israeli conflict, often also working jointly with Egyptians and Jordanians, as well as in Africa, Central, East and South Asia, the Former Soviet Union and the Americas, including on ethnic, religious and water resource conflicts as well as human rights and democracy issues. In the area of human rights, his work focuses on human rights education and training of the law enforcement agencies, particularly in Latin America.”

This presentation is co-sponsored by the Latin American Studies Program, the Harold Schnitzer Family Program in Judaic Studies at the University of Oregon, and the departments of Romance Languages and International Studies.
